

Carranza Refuses U. S. Requests for the Use of Railroads and Telegraph

Pessimism on Border at Reported Lack of Co-operation in Bandit Hunt.

The Mexican railway and telegraph companies, which are controlled by the Carranza government, have refused to allow the United States to use their lines for the purpose of hunting bandits. This man, though badly injured, made his way to the T. M. Wings ranch and informed a detachment of Troop K, Eighth Cavalry, of the outrage. The detachment immediately started in the direction of the bandits. The bandits were undoubtedly killed.

It is in this district that evidence has been smuggled into Mexico to kill "Pancho".

While the hunt for the Carranza bandits was in progress it became known that representatives of the United States would press at Washington for Congressional action to impress Carranza with the fact that his government must co-operate actively with the Americans in the pursuit of the bandits.

Representatives from Douglas, Ariz., state that all Americans employed in the Carranza army in Sonora have been discharged on orders from General Carranza. No reason for this action is known.

C. E. Kelly, owner of the ranch which was raided by Carranza last night, sent word here today that some of the bandits were arrested by American cavalrymen and that a running fight ensued in which more than 100 men were killed. At Fort Huachuca, it was said, however, that no word of any fight had been received.

FEAR VILLA CUNNING IN LURING PURSUERS

By H. M. STANSBURY.

El Paso, Tex., March 28 (By Courier and Mexican Federal Telegraph).—Francisco Villa, the human fox, was reported last night to have been located again. He was said to be working his way from the Rio Grande to the city of El Paso, where he was believed to be the purpose of the move.

General Pershing has divided his forces into four columns, with the cavalry command of Colonel George A. Dodd leading the advance east of Chihuahua. Villa has a twenty-mile lead on his pursuers, but his horses were tired.

The commander of the flying army column expected to be pressing him hard before this morning, unless the wily Mexican diverged from the trail into the mountains.

The column which had been ordered to follow Villa was reported to have been at Colonia Chiquila, 150 miles east of El Paso, where Villa was believed to be hiding.

Fall Would Seize Mexican Railroad

El Paso, March 28.—(By Courier and Mexican Federal Telegraph).—The Carranza government refused to permit American troops to use the Mexican railway, which was the only route for the transport of supplies to the border.

The Carranza government stated that it was not willing to allow American troops to use the railway for the purpose of transporting supplies to the border. It stated that the railway was the property of the Mexican government and that it was not willing to allow it to be used for the purpose of transporting supplies to the border.

ST RATS KILLING

Hospital today to secure a detailed confession from Dr. Waite in an attempt to clear up the death of Mrs. Peck and the connection with the entire affair which other persons are supposed to have.

Under orders from the District Attorney, Frank Waite was allowed to see his brother at will, and the two had a long conference.

BROTHER KNOWS ALL.

Just prior to that interview Frank Waite was asked if his family were urging the denial to make a clean breast of everything.

"That report hits the mark," Mr. Waite answered. "I think I know everything about my brother's connection with the crime."

As he emerged from the prison ward Mr. Waite was visibly excited, at that time he was reluctant to make a statement until after he had conferred with the District Attorney.

Mr. Waite was asked if he had employed a lawyer. "Yes," he said, "we have a lawyer. I can't give you his name, however. You may rest assured that we are making no moves without the proper legal advice."

"Did you suggest to your brother that he divulge his whole connection with the crime and take a plea of guilty?" he was asked. "I can't answer that question or other like it," came the answer.

"Can't you tell what he confessed to you?"

"Not at this time," Mr. Waite said.

"Without Waite's confession we have enough to send him to the electric chair," Investigator Mancuso said. "What we want to do is to clear up the whole matter. We want to know where the other rat is."

Mr. Mancuso said the District Attorney's office will refuse to take a plea of insanity. "The man was sane and we can prove it," he said. "We anticipated such a plea from the time that Dr. Waite took all the sulphur tablets."

"Not only the District Attorney will be denied with such a plea, but Percy Peck, son of the alleged murderer man, says he will spend $50,000 if necessary to convict Dr. Waite."

"When Dr. Waite obtained these germ culture from Weber, the medical school attendant," said the District Attorney, "he told the doctor that he was experimenting in his own home. That appears to have been true. The glass table and bits of glass for that were termed 'specimens' of these cultures for microscopic examination were found in Waite's library in his home, but none of the cultures were discovered there."

A BATTLE OVER INSANITY.

Dr. Waite proposed that a prospective defense based on allegations of insanity in this case. Mr. Mancuso did so of his own initiative in Grand Rapids and otherwise fortified the District Attorney's position in this case. Dr. Waite has not shown the least inclination to be in custody nor while he was under surveillance of agents of this office."

Dr. Waite's father, the dentist, sent to the District Attorney evidence of the existence of insanity in Dr. Waite. That this is to be used in seeking to affect the degree of punishment for Dr. Waite, if he is convicted, was plain from the degree of all his relatives.

"I do not think that any punishment less than the statutory limit proposed by the District Attorney is justified."

STYLE SHOW CYRIL MAUDE AT KET'S PLEASES

There are ample exits at Ket's Theatre and all of them were open last night. But none of them were used as the conclusion of the show, which proved as we were saying, that the men are just as curious about the latest women's apparel as are the women about the latest men's.

The celebrated fashion show of 1916 is the concluding number on the bill last night, but there was no end on the part of the male sex to get away from it, although there were plenty of males in the audience.

This show demonstrates the apparel upon the living models. It is supposed to represent the seven ages of dress, as it were, and that lady may properly wear from married, young, old and even, in the beginning, a little less than the fashion, and in the end, a little more than the fashion.

The rest of the bill is interesting, consisting of acts by Larry Gillett, Jerry of the "Criminals," Stanley and company in a novelty act, and Hans Egan, an accomplished violin virtuoso.

The "Horse" Viennese show special will be a sensational and up-to-date, as usual.

CHANKLIN PARK THEATRE—A variety audience composed last night of the best of the town, and the feature, "The Phantom of the Opera," with Miss Nease, was a success.

The story of the Phantom of the Opera was nothing short of a sensation. The Vandellie program was a genuine merit.

"The Iron Claw" becomes more interesting as the program goes on, and the principal role, with new hearts at every performance, and the show for the first time of the week will have as the feature, "The Love of the King," by William R. Farrell, and has been handily and adequately made in addition to the musical entry there is an all-star variety.

THE SECOND LONGING LOOK

Every woman knows what it means, and strives for it—that token of admiration, the unconscious tribute to superior style that makes you turn for a second glance. In all assemblages, it is the women whose costumes are made from Pictorial Review Patterns who attract the most flattering and admiring comment. No other patterns are so chic—so distinctive in style.

Life is not merely to live, but to live well, eat well, digest well, work well, sleep well, look well. What a glorious condition to attain, and yet how very easy it is if one will only adopt the sound inside medicine.

Folk who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when they are splitting headaches, stuffy from cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel fresh as a daisy by opening to the office of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnation.

Everyone, whether adult, child, well, should, each morning, before breakfast, drink a glass of fruit water with a teaspoonful of lemon phosphate in it to wash the stomach, liver, kidneys, a bowl of the previous day's indigestion, sour blood, and poison, and purifying the entire system, each before putting more food to the stomach. The action of a water and lemon phosphate an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the old fermentations, gases, and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. We are enjoying your breakfast water and phosphate is quietly treating a large volume of water from the blood, and getting rid of through flushing of all its impurities.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spots, stomach trouble, rheumatism, and other ailments, who have no other means of relief, and who are urged to get a purgative of lemon phosphate from the drug store which will do very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation and diet.

Once you have tried Pictorial Review Patterns you will never use any other kind.

MAY PICTORIAL REVIEW PATTERNS now ready for you.

Burn SOCONY KEROSENE

Kerosene is "coming in."

More and more people are coming to recognize the convenience, the cleanliness and especially the economy of oil fuel when used in the highly efficient stoves, heaters and lamps now on the market. Improvements in oil-burning devices have fully kept pace with the development of gas and electric appliances.

What is more, kerosene itself has been improved.

All kerosene isn't alike by any means. And the good, clean, clear-burning kind is enough better to be worth asking for by name.

SOCONY Kerosene is the trademarked brand name of the Standard Oil Company of New York's best grade of refined oil. Dealers who carry genuine SOCONY Kerosene Oil display the SOCONY sign and the word "Kerosene." Look for this sign. It is the sign of quality and the World's best kerosene.

We recommend the following oil-burning devices as the best of their kind: New Perfection Oil Cookstoves and Water Heaters, Rayo Lamps and Lanterns.

WESTERN MINISTERS PRIZE AMERICAN'S STAND

Western mails bring added endorsement to the Boston AMERICAN of the crusade against habit-forming drugs.

New England readers, particularly clergymen and business men, have written endorsements, numerous and hearty, of the AMERICAN'S stand on this matter. William Randolph Hearst is praised for attacking the drug and liquor evils.

From Oliver, Ill., comes a letter written by the Rev. William B. Schuman. He is superintendent of Chicago Central District of the Nazarene Church of the Nazarene. From his Western headquarters Pastor Schuman writes as follows:

EDITOR BOSTON AMERICAN:
"Words cannot express my pleasure at the attitude of Mr. Hearst towards the whiskey and drug forming habit. I certainly approve of the press taking the position of acting as guardian of the public health, and on one where it can educate and instruct the very persons the public cannot touch or it it does touch them, in a very concise way."

NEWSPAPER IMPRESSES PUBLIC:
The newspaper will reach thousands, and the pulp reaches hundreds. Again people expect the pulp to protect against the whole body and soul-destroying business and has no respect for the public, that is silent against this giant evil, but also too often, the public are not impressed by the public denunciation of this great crime for the reason that they feel it is only professional men who are writing about the raising of the rank Republican against the present administration.

A campaign against this terrible scourge conducted by the newspaper or newspapers of our country would be sure to have a wholesome effect upon the mind of the people, which would be the first point of successful attack against this immoral fact to humanity.

I would suggest that a reporter devote his time entirely to this crusade, assisted by a cartoonist who will collect data of striking instances of the result of present methods, and he or she have a portion of the paper (the same edition) where the people will get into the habit of looking for the article just as the ordinary citizen looks for your good editorials, or the boy (who will also make a lot for the strip, "The Job.")

FRANKS MR. HEARST:
A conscientious man who has the courage of his convictions (like Mr. Hearst), could be of great value in this crusade. The public mind of our country would demand a change of present conditions.

Wishing you every success in your noble undertaking and assuring you of my little co-operation we can give you, we are,
Yours for a better world,
ALFRED W. D. QUINN

Superintendent Chicago Central District of the Nazarene Church of the Nazarene, Oliver, Ill.
The Rev. J. B. Schuman, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Lincoln, Ill., writes with Mr. Hearst's attitude toward liquor advertising in the daily papers. We are living in a time when the moral people cannot read newspapers in the home, especially where there are children. I agree with him in every point of his statement. Believe me, to the pulp, the newspaper is the most powerful stimulus to high ideals in morals.

From Lawrence comes the following:
No. 512 Essex street, Lawrence, Mass.
Do believe the newspaper should be a purveyor of news, including the public mind of our country and not. As existing influence upon the public mind, the newspaper should be a moral teacher.

BEST WAY TO COMBAT VICE:
The pastor of the Second Church in Rev. John Edgar Rice writes that:
The Rev. Mr. Hearst has taken this step, and believe it is the best way of combating the great evil in this country. If all newspapers could only do this, the crusade against alcoholic advertising and the advertisement of habit-forming drugs it would be a great step in advance.

If also in novels and plays we could get away from the idea that "hard life" and "good times" are necessarily associated with free indulgence in alcoholic liquors, it would be another great step in the right direction.

The Rev. A. B. Phillips of No. 15 Vinson street, Rochester, congratulates the AMERICAN and offers several suggestions. I suggest that you should publish the names of the persons who are affected by drink and drugs, morally, mentally, physically and financially. The Rev. A. B. GRANGE HEAD AGAINST MILK BILL

Although the Massachusetts State Grange has indicated its plan to secure state supervision over the production and distribution of milk in the interest of public health, state health commissioners Allen J. McLaughlin found today that he must overcome the opposition of State Grange President Edward E. Chapman of Ludlow.

Mr. McLaughlin appeared today before the Committee on Agriculture and Public Health at the State House to support his bill to give the State Department of Health complete authority over the production and distribution of milk in the interest of public health. He was met by a large number of Grangers who opposed his bill.

Mr. Chapman appeared today before the committee and opposed Mr. McLaughlin's bill. He said that the Grange had no objection to state supervision of the production and distribution of milk, but that it had no objection to the Grange's own supervision.

Mr. McLaughlin replied that the Grange's own supervision was not sufficient to protect the public health. He said that the State Department of Health was the only agency that could protect the public health.

Quinn Launches Drive in Court House Corridor

Today was "clean up" day at the courthouse. Sheriff Quinn appointed two court officers to clean the corridors of all court runners, ambulance chasers and smokers.

The so-called "smokers" of Pemberton square will no longer enjoy the courthouse corridors. Neither will legal hounds go through the corridors smoking. The "no smoking" sign means something now, according to the sheriff. Each day the two special officers will be on duty and arrests will follow any breach of the rules.

These fellows use these corridors for club rooms. Sheriff Quinn said, "It's not right. I'm going to have these corridors clean. That means everybody."

PERCE HAND TO HAND FIGHTING BETWEEN BRITISH AND GERMANS

London, March 28.—German and British troops are engaged in hand-to-hand fighting near St. Eloi on the Flanders front, each striving to secure possession of the capture of the other by the explosion, by which the British threw up the German positions at the opening of their offensive there.

The battle has also extended in the line adjacent to the point where the British hand-to-hand fighting.

The German official report issued this afternoon states there have been no new developments at Verdun.

The official German report follows:

"Western theatre of war:

"Brought Up" on Father John's Medicine, which Cured Her of a Terrible Cough and Built Her Up

Her father in a recent letter said: "My little daughter is certainly a picture of health. She was very much run down and had a terrible cough, after trying a doctor's medicine, which did very little good, we gave her Father John's Medicine, with the pleasing result that she was soon well, and we know that Father John's Medicine will keep her well."

(Signed) G. C. Kingsland, Lancaster, Minn.

Father John's Medicine is a safe medicine for children as well as adults, because it contains no alcohol or dangerous drugs in any form, but strengthens and builds up the whole system because it is made of pure and wholesome nourishing ingredients.—Advertisement.

"Fighting at close quarters has developed south of St. Eloi around the mine craters formed by the explosion of English mines. The action has extended to the adjacent lines. There is nothing fresh to report on the Meuse."

East of the Meuse River, in the Verdun sector, the night was calm. There was activity on the part of the artillery, and a surprise attack, announced by the French War Office today. There was no change in the general situation on the Verdun front.

The text of the official French communiqué follows:

"The night was quiet east of the Meuse. The artillery on both sides showed rather great activity west of the Meuse in the region of Malancourt, and also in the Woëvre region in the sector at the base of the Meuse heights."

In Lorraine, in the forest of Parroy, we observed a surprise attack, upon one of the enemy's works. The Germans were killed, or made prisoners. On retiring we blew up their works. No more important events occurred on the rest of the front."

"Russians Save Verdun and Suez"

By International News Service.

Petrograd, March 28.—The Russians have saved Verdun and the Suez Canal.

That is the view held by the leading military critics, who see in the great offensive against the Austro-Germans and the drive through Persia and Armenia two master strokes which may prove to have been the salvation of the allies.

Germany has been forced to shift troops back to the eastern front that were needed for the Verdun enterprise. Turkish troops and German officers that were being concentrated for the drive into Egypt had to be recalled to reinforce the armies facing the Russians.

General Hoffmann, the Russian Minister of War, in an interview made an official inquiry into the Russian plan for military operations in the west and the Official has been upset.

Although the Russians have suffered severe casualties in their attacks against the strong German positions along the Dvina river and in front of Irkutsk, the results have more than offset the losses, as fortified works have been carried by storm within the Russian lines.

Despite obstinate resistance the Russians have followed two lines of trenches northwest of Pousty in German assaults that followed a violent bombardment.

In the region of Lake Narog, which has been the scene of terrific fighting between the two armies, the Russians have won a series of counter-attacks, for more than a week, the Germans which cost them heavily.

WAR SUMMARY

The British have made a mine attack, followed by an infantry assault of some importance, according to today's official statements. They captured a stretch of German trenches which they say extended for 600 yards, and included the first and second line of defenses.

The Germans say more than 100 yards of their trenches were blown up in this attack, but do not say how much territory was lost to the British.

This British attack may be in reply to Joffre's second appeal to England to relieve the pressure on Verdun. This second appeal was made two days ago. Two weeks previously, in response to a similar request, the British sent some troops to Verdun.

The Russian attacks continue. Petrograd announces the capture of two lines of trenches northwest of Pousty, and speaks of encountering "obstinate resistance" near Lake Narog.

The Germans report repulsing Russian attacks and inflicting heavy losses at several points, and say that in the Narog Lake region they not only repulsed the Russians, but by a counter attack recaptured ground lost March 20, and took some 2,000 prisoners in addition.

There was nothing but artillery fighting about Verdun, though at Maucourt a German attack was crushed by the French.

Gorizia and Rovereto have again been bombarded.

WILLARD AND MORAN IN HEAVYWEIGHT CHAMPIONSHIP BATTLE, AS CAUGHT BY "MOVIES"

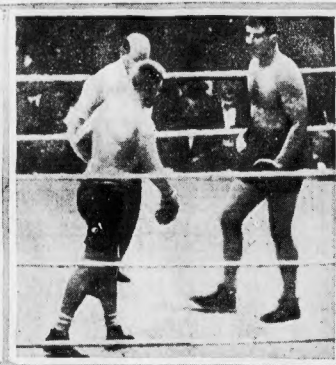

This picture shows the very first punch of the fight. Moran has landed his left to the body. Willard holds it and tries to hook his left to Moran's face. Look at the next picture.

You see here a snap taken about a second after the preceding one. Willard's left, that he tried to shoot at Moran's head, is being pulled away.

This is Round Three. Moran, who was against the ropes, is pushing Willard back. Referee Charley White, fearful that they may hit in the break, is stepping between them.

Moran has just left his corner at the bell in the fourth, and is starting to rush the giant before him. See his head lowered like a bull. Willard has his hands down as usual. He holds no high guard.

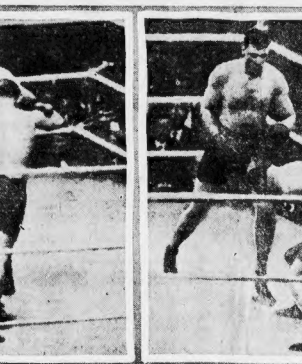

Moran is measuring Willard here in the fifth round to land his "MARY ANN" (right). He held this pose continually during the fight. Willard became enraged occasionally and knocked it down.

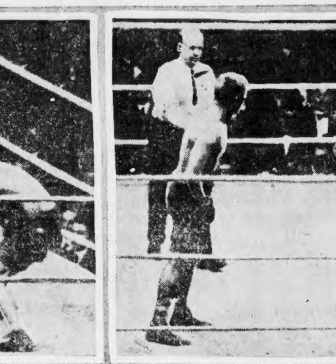

Moran has landed his "MARY ANN" under the heart in this picture of the sixth round, and Willard wants to keep him in close, so as to work his uppercut, that he learned from Johnson. He is holding, however, and is ordered to break.

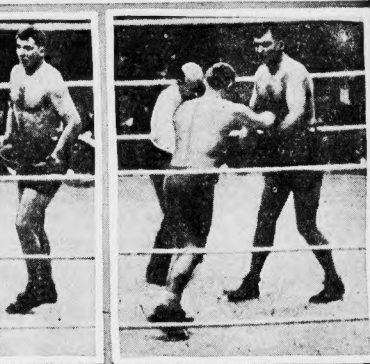

Willard uppercut Moran fiercely in this picture, taken at the close of the sixth stanza. Frank held on to save himself from further punishment until he recovered from the blow, and Referee White is pulling Willard away.

This is the seventh round. Willard has forced Moran to a neutral corner and pounded him viciously. Frank is trying to duck away, but the champion is right on top of him, pulling back his right for another.

Seventh Round. Willard has tired after pounding Moran from post to post and has stepped back to get a breath. Moran, bleeding, but still, looks up at his adversary. In a moment he will spring like a tiger and make that great finish.

Here is the start of the thrilling finish Moran made in the seventh. He landed his right to the pit of the stomach and a moment later had the big fellow on the ropes groggy and anxious for the bell, which sounded a minute afterward.

WELTERS WILLARD TO GO IT AT HIP AGAIN

Eddie Murphy and Frankie Mack Feature Army A. A. Card; Reddy On with McFarland.

By International News Service, CHICAGO, March 28.—Ready to meet any man between now and April 29, when his contract with the circus begins, Jess Willard returned home yesterday from his victory over Frank Moran in New York, Saturday night. Chicago's reception committee took the form of nearly 50,000 hero worshippers, and a sold, driving rain, but the champion paid little heed to these marks of adoration. As far as a willing automobile could carry him, he was sped to his home in Rogers Park, where his wife and four children were awaiting him. One reason for the champion's so much haste in returning to his friends was that a new trip to the Willard fortune is expected daily. "My contract with the circus starts April 29," said Willard. "We open in the west and work slowly eastward, as I understand it. I am not sure I will box anybody before that time or not."

"It depends upon how things break and whether anybody is willing to undertake another big match. It doesn't matter a bit to me who my opponent might be, Fred Fulton, if they like, or anybody else that may come along."

Willard's return to Chicago is the first of the "titanic" program his work. He got that, like an invincible man, he is expected to make some of the best of the rest now it is 2 to 1 in the house's favor.

Why I Never Married

No. 1—The Woman Who Did Not Dare Propose Tells Her Story.

WHY do so many women who are attractive, intelligent, full of human affection and tenderness—the sort of women who were designed by nature to make ideal wives and mothers—never marry?

Is it because they were bent on celibacy? Or is it because men were too stupid to know a good thing when they saw it, and so passed them over? Or is it the fault of social conditions that never gave them their matrimonial chance?

It is one of life's great puzzles, and in an attempt to solve it, Dorothy Dix has asked a number of charming old maids why they never married.

By DOROTHY DIX
"I have never married. I am an old maid," said the first woman, "because custom and convention demand a woman from picking out her mate. If I had been permitted to propose the question I should have been a nice old grandmother, knitting pink baby socks, instead of a lonely old spinster trying to fill in her life with a vicious interest in 'household economics.'"

"Of course I had plenty of chances to marry. Every woman who has a freak can marry if she will take what she can get, but, as the children say, I was 'choicy.' I knew exactly the kind of a man I wanted for a husband, and if I couldn't get him I preferred to do without one."

"I am an old maid because the man who proposed to me I wouldn't have as a gift, and the man I wanted, I didn't have the courage to propose to myself."

A COMMON CASE:
"I think my case is a very common one. There are many women like myself who have a high ideal of what marriage should mean. To them it should be a real mating, a union of heart and soul. They are incapable of marrying for a home, or a support, or for the pleasure of writing 'letters' before their names."

"These women would be glad enough to marry if the right man came along, but when he doesn't they refuse to compromise. As a matter of fact, they would rather be old maids than make a mockery of marriage. They would rather do without love than to take a lower love."

"Now, the maddening thing to those of us who belong to this class of old maids is that we do not go through life searching for an impossible ideal of a man without ever finding him. The tragedy lies in the fact that we generally do find him, but convention doesn't allow us to grab him and run off home with him and live happily ever after."

"On the contrary, we have to live a lonely, dreary, trying life, and we have to live with the old news that we will never marry."

In Our Very Wonderful World

POLTOAST is the universal practice in the equatorial provinces. "It would be absolutely improper," says Emin Pasha, "for even a small child to have fewer than ten or fifteen wives." The usual price of a wife in Thurea is four oxen or cows, unless she be as plain as the white of an egg, in which case a reduction is made.

Among the Madli the value of wives and oxen and the pay of porters are calculated in shovels. Marriage customs vary with tribes, but, as a rule, the bride has little option in the matter. Among the Madli when a young man wishes to marry he mentions the matter to his father, who takes the question over with the father of the young woman, and subsequently all the bride's relatives, from grandfather to female cousin, hold a family council.

A large price is usually asked for the girl, say a hundred oxen, which is probably taken down to about forty, and when the bride is handed over her father gives a feast, and if he be generous, he will return ten of the oxen. The Amar will not allow their girls to marry out of the tribe, but the men among them marry little girls, who may be obtained cheaply for a few goats or shovels. Distantly, however, and other native boys in a very general, and both sexes smile contentedly.

Coffee grows luxuriantly, but the beans are only used for chewing. Camellia is preferred for almost every tree, though the practice is concealed in the neighborhood of the station.

There is no substantial reason for common belief that the bloodhound is a fierce animal. It is a friendly dog, and is used to guard the person whom it may be tracking. It is, in fact, a very friendly, rather noted for its gentleness, and is especially trained to attack the griffin of the breed, according to the Count de Montebello, an authority on the subject, is from the St. Hubert of the Hottentots in the Ardennes. It dates from the earliest ages, and has been found to exist in the time of the Gauls.

As regards the name "bloodhound," the Count de Montebello believes that when first hunting something like its present form was instituted, it was found that the steeplehead was not fast enough for the old hound of the country, to call him bloodhound, meaning the hound of pure blood, as might be said of a blooded horse—to distinguish him from the new hound or fast hound, which is only one breed of pure, genuine bloodhound, and that is the English.

"The enemy offered no resistance. They ran up the white flag at the first desperate encounter—we captured many prisoners and much booty of war."

"There is a general impression in official circles that the enemy does not really hate us."

The Soul and the Teachings of Evolution

Garrett P. Serviss Describes the Mighty Work of the Creator Seen in the Progressive Forms of Animals Left in the Rocks—To the Soul Science Can Apply None of Its Tests, He Says

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

"ANSWERS to the following questions will be greatly appreciated: (1) Science affords the theory of evolution. Does this destroy the truth of the Biblical narrative of creation? (2) Does science admit or deny the existence of the soul?—P. A. W."

Suppose somebody should say to you: "We are bound to believe from what is said in Genesis about the creation of animals that the first horse was a complete and perfect horse. The Almighty made the apes and horses in the beginning as a horse and nothing else."

If you had no special knowledge on the subject you might accept that as the truth, and you might believe that it was a truth divinely revealed to man.

But now suppose that you enter the American Museum of Natural History, and that an attendant should show you (as one will do if you go there, a long series of fossil bones and skeletons, taken from the ancient strata by the earth, and forming a complete series, leading up, link by link, from a little animal as big as a foot, which lived millions of years ago, to the fully developed horse of to-day.

Should you point out to you (as he will do) the evidence of the fact, which any court would have to accept, that the bones were gradually accomplished, by regular steps, in the following order: first, all progressing in the order of time, from the oldest strata, and then, taken from older strata, the resemblance to a horse than to a foot, which lived millions of years ago, to the fully developed horse of to-day.

These taken from newer strata, and suppose, finally, that he should (as he can do, show you, in the skeleton of the modern horse, proofs that its hoofs have been developed from three-toed and free-toed feet, like those possessed by its ill-fated ancestor ages ago, and that its teeth, and other parts of its body, have likewise been developed from the forms which they had in its progenitors—after seeing and hearing all that, what would you say to the man who told you that God created the horse at a single stroke?

Would you feel that you were disrespectful to the Great Creator if you declared upon the basis of the evidence put before you, that He did not make the horse in an instant, but, by virtue of His wisdom, that He built it up gradually, through many wonderfully linked forms, requiring millions of years of their evolution, in the full record of how life did it in the rocks, and where is the freer exercise of reading and believing that record?

It happens that we have a very perfect series of animals, from revealing the evolution of the horse, but the evidence that all species of animals, not excepting man, have been gradually developed in a similar manner is just as clear and irrefragable as it is in the case of the horse. The monkey and the ape are often spoken of as the ancestors of man, as if they were to him the same relationship that the extinct brachyomorph and plioanthropus do to the human, but the fact of this notion (which no evolutionist ever entertained or taught) is sufficiently indicated by the fact that the apes and monkeys are our contemporaries. The teaching of science is that they are, phylogically, a collateral and inferior branch of the order of animals to which man belongs.

The simple fact is that man and ape have been evolved from some common ancestor different from either. Their nearest kindred, yet been already identified, is fossil remains, however, to be everywhere embedded in the earth's rich crust.

With the effect of these facts upon the narrative of creation, science does not concern itself. Science did not set out to destroy or disprove that narrative. It set out only to learn all that it could about the earth and the history of the earth and the universe, as far as they can be apprehended by human senses. If the facts of evolution had been known in ancient times the Bible would not have been written as it was written.

Concerning the soul, science has nothing to say, because, to that, it can apply none of its tests. It is a conception lying entirely outside of the scientific field. Nevertheless, science does not affirm that the soul does not exist. There is no reason why the man of science should not be just as much impressed as anybody else by the wonderful words that describe adoration to his friend when he was about to die.

"If the soul is immortal, then does the stand in want of care, not only during this period which we call life, but for all time, and we may well consider that there is terrible danger in neglecting her. If death indeed were an escape from all things, then were it a great gain to the wise, for it would be a release from the body and from their own sin, and from the soul at the same time; but, if the soul were immortal, there is no other escape but to come to some other safety than in her attaining to the highest virtue and wisdom."

Why Woolens Shrink

Learn now for all time how to avoid this shrinking

Wool differs wholly from all other fabrics. In the choice of your soap product, and in your handling of woolens, lies the secret of safety, of complete success in laundering woolens.

The sensitiveness of wool fiber to alkali, to changes of temperature, and rubbing, are the causes of shrinkage. Lux will clean them thoroughly without rubbing. Throw the proper amount of Lux into boiling or very hot water, whisk into a lather. Put in the clothes and let them soak for a few minutes; then work them about in the suds to dissolve the dirt. Lux will clean them perfectly without rubbing.

Lux will clean them perfectly without rubbing. It mingles with hot iron and never rub woolens. It never irons or mends them.

Rinse thoroughly in three relays of water of the same temperature, squeeze the water out without twisting.

No matter what soap you use now—see for yourself what a remarkable difference Lux makes. Don't say woolens can't be washed in hot water—try washing them the Lux way. Until you do so, you will never believe it possible to get such wonderful soft woolens. Lux is sold everywhere. Lux Soap Co., Cambridge, Mass.

Advice to the Lovelorn

YOU ARE RISKING TOO MUCH

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
I am a married woman of twenty-two and have a little daughter three years old, but am going out the way with a man thirty years my senior and am quite sure that I am doing the right thing, or had I ought to give him up? I am not sure for him why is not a divorce possible? But to cheat give up the other man for the present.

WHAT you are doing is foolish as well as wrong. It is endangering your future and the happiness of your child. The world will make her suffer for it if you do not repent, either you will care for your husband and hope for a reconciliation some day, or you will care for your child and hope for a reconciliation some day, or you will care for your child and hope for a reconciliation some day.

BE HONEST

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
I am twenty-two years of age and engaged to a young man who goes out in society and whose mother is a great deal. His parents approve of our marriage because I am a settled girl. Now, I am so ignorant of the ways of the world, as I have never attended any social gathering, that I am not sure I am not ashamed of him as I could not be a better wife than I am. I would rather give him up and this would break my heart.

A MAN'S FRIENDS

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
For eighteen months I have been keeping company with a young man who is two years my senior. I love him dearly and I am sure my love is always reciprocated. I recently, when he started to associate with a young man whom I very much dislike, my friend knows that I have very good reason for my action, but says I should not interfere.

It is sure I would break my heart to leave him, and yet we can never be friends if he continues to associate with this young man. I have written to you if you before, but did not receive an answer. ETRILL.

WOMAN to dictate to you as to your intimates? My friends, though obedient to you, may mean a great deal to him, and I think you are altogether too exacting. In any case, it is very seldom that a woman takes the time to dictate to a man as to his masculine affairs. I think the "man with a woman" is a really undesirable thing. If you had better, instead of arguing about him from your mind.

SHIPPING BILL
ACTION URGED
BY WILSON

By International News Service.
Washington, March 28.—President Wilson today urged House leaders to speed up consideration of two matters of legislation on which he said the whole movement of our trade and industry seemed to be waiting for an investigation into transportation conditions on the railroads.

In a letter to Mr. Kilgore, the President said:

My dear Mr. Kilgore:

In considering the program of the session, there are two matters which seem to me to stand out more prominently than the rest, as matters in which time presses even though the matter should not be delayed to take precedence in legislative importance. It would seem as if the whole movement of our trade and industry waited on satisfactory solution of our problems of transportation.

That is the reason why it seems to me that the shipping bill should be passed as soon as possible, and I write today to express the hope that the Senate will take prompt action on it.

I did not put this on the bill, but I am sure that the shipping bill is the most important matter of the session, and it is the only one of which the public has any knowledge.

The railroads of the country are in a state of confusion, and it is the only one of which the public has any knowledge.

I hope that you will agree with me that this important matter can be disposed of without putting it in the hands of the Senate. I am sure that you will agree with me that this important matter can be disposed of without putting it in the hands of the Senate.

Very truly yours,

Cultivate Thought--Teach Your Brain to Work Early

Copyright, 1916, by the New England

TWO centuries back a young man of twenty-three sat in the quiet of the evening. THINKING.

His body was quiet; his vitality, his life, all his powers, were centered in his brain.

Above, the moon shone, and around him rustled the branches of the trees in his father's orchard.

From one of the trees an apple fell.

No need to tell you that the young man was Newton; that the fall of the apple started in his READY brain the thought that led to his great discovery, giving him time to last until this earth shall crumble.

How splendid the achievement born that moment! How fortunate for the world and for the youth Newton that at twenty-three his brain had cultivated the HABIT OF THOUGHT!

Our muscles we share with everything that lives—with the oyster clinging to his rock, the whale plunging through cold seas, and our monkey kinsman swinging from his tropical branch.

These muscles, useful only to cart us around, help us to do slave work or pound our fellows, we cultivate with care.

We run, fence, ride, walk hard, weary our poor lungs and gather pains in our backs building the muscles that we do not need.

Alone among animals, we possess a potentiality of mind development unlimited.

And for that, with few exceptions, we care nothing.

Most of us, sitting in Newton's place and seeing the apple fall, would merely have debated the advisability of getting the apple to eat it—just the process that any monkey mind would pass through.

A Newton, A BRAIN TRAINED TO THINK, sees the apple drop, asks himself why the moon does not drop also. And he discovers the law of gravitation which governs the existence of every material atom in the universe.

Young men who read this, start in NOW to use your brains. Take nothing for granted, not even the fact that the moon stays in her appointed place or that the poor starve and freeze amid plenty.

Think of the things which are wrong and of the possibilities of righting them. Study your own weaknesses and imperfections. There is power in your brain to correct them, if you will develop that power.

As surely as you can train your arm to hold fifty pounds out straight, just so surely can you train your brain to deal with problems that now would find you a gaping incompetent.

You may not be a Newton. But if you can condescend to aim at being an inferior Sundow, can't you afford to try even harder to be an inferior Newton?

Don't be a muscular monkey. Be a low-grade philosopher, if you can't be high-grade, and find how much true pleasure there is even in inferior brain gymnastics.

Take up some problem and study it!

There goes a woman, poor and old. She carries a heavy burden because she is too sad and weak to fight against fate, too honest to leave a world that treats her harshly.

There struts a youngster, rich and idle.

How many centuries of hell on earth will it take to put that woman's load on that other broad, fat, idle back?

Answer that one question; better still, TRANSFER THE LOAD, and your life will not have been wasted.

It is THOUGHT that moves the world. In Napoleon's BRAIN are born the schemes that murder millions and yet push civilization on. The mere soldier, with gold lace and sharp sword, is nothing—a mere tool.

It is the concentrated thought of the English people under Puritan influence that makes Great Britain a sham monarchy and a real republic now.

It is the thought of the men of independent MIND in this country that throws English tea and English rule overboard forever.

Don't wait until you are old. Don't wait until you are ONE DAY older. Begin NOW.

Or, later, with a dull, fuzzy, useless mind, you will realize that an unthinking mind might as well have been a monkey, with fur instead of trousers, and consequent freedom from mental responsibility or self-respect.

Once-Overs

Beware of the person who talks to you in a derogatory manner about a mutual friend.

There is no reason to believe, if a woman has appeared to be a friend of the one against whom she talks, that she will not turn on you as quickly when discussing you with other friends.

To be able to tell some one else the secrets of another is the great incentive that some people have for gaining the confidence of their companions.

Don't you be led along so easily. You should be very careful about telling to any one matters of great importance to yourself, for to the possessor of knowledge about your private affairs when that knowledge might be used against you.

"This is one of the most important reasons why our best friends may become our worst enemies."

Because they do know so much about us, they are able to say and do the things which can hurt us most.

Frequently, with the best intentions in the world, a friend becomes a cat's paw for some one who is "prying" for an evil purpose. Be keen your secrets to yourself. It is merely a matter of self-protection.

WOULDN'T IT MAKE YOU MAD?

Fighting the Spring Epidemic

By Woods Hutchinson, M. D.

The World's Best Known Writer on Medical Subjects.

THERE is one marked and striking advantage about our modern view of the causation of the March epidemic. It gives us control over them in large measure. When we believed they were due to the weather, we were pretty nearly helpless, for while we have considerable power over some things, we certainly cannot control the weather any more than another most powerful—and changeable—influence that begins with "we."

We can do much, and are already doing much, toward reducing this heavy spring disease rate; partly by urging the open-air life all through the winter to cut down and counteract the piling up of toxins and hot-house effects; partly by taking special pains at this time of year to prevent the spread of the contagious diseases that are now so deadly; partly by giving ourselves and our children every possible advantage of rest, vacation and relief from strain that we can at this season.

Not the Weather

Parents, keep your children away from contagious diseases and from every child who either looks or acts sick, because this is the time of year at which their resistance against them is lowest! It is not that the germs, or contagions, of these diseases are more virulent or more aggressive at this time of the year, but that the human soil has been so peculiarly and favorably prepared for their growth that they grow like weeds wherever their chance seed is scattered.

Now we know that the seed of each of these infections is kept alive and carried over between epidemics by human beings, or occasionally animals, known as "carriers."

These are individuals who have had the disease and have recovered from it, but instead of eradicating the germs from their system, still carry colonies of them lurking about in various spots and corners of their bodies.

The Resting Germs

Most frequently about the roots of their teeth, or the sinuses of the nose in catarrh, or in the pockets about their tonsils, or in their gall bladders or appendix, or in swollen glands or abscesses in various parts of the body.

"These colonies of 'resting' or 'winter' germs are so numerous of use to the host who entertains them; in fact, there is reason to believe that they slowly poison the blood and often produce gout, rheumatism and anemia as well as occasionally serious diseases of the heart, kidney and nervous system, but they do not produce another attack of the disease."

A carrier of this sort, with a scolding germ-fest in him, may go about harmlessly for months or even years, until something that he sneezes out or coughs or spits gets into the fingers or in the food, into the mouth or into the nose of some child who has never had the disease and whose resisting power is lowered by ill-health, indoor confinement, injudicious feeding or over-exertion.

Then it bursts out into the phase of a full-blown attack of the disease and spreads like a prairie fire to every other child of susceptible age brought in contact with the sufferer, particularly if they, too, have been subject to the same depressing winter influences.

The moral of which is: Keep your child, particularly at this time of the year, away from every other child that looks sick or unhealthy; and also from every boy, girl or grown-up who has red eyes or a blocked or snuffling nose, or is hacking and spitting with common catarrh, or has an offensive breath from congested teeth, or even sties much from rheumatism or gout or anemia.

Give Him a Chance

If you do, you will greatly diminish his risks of catching not only colds and sore throats, but also tuberculosis, pneumonia, bronchitis, scarlet fever, diphtheria and measles.

Clean up the so-called chronic diseases, which scatter germs as considerable proportion of the same. Infectious ones will disappear.

On the other hand, if your child is unfortunate enough to develop one of these milder infections of childhood diseases, keep him at home, at rest and comfortably in warm air, either through wide windows or out of doors, and you will not only give him his best chance (and a thirty-five chance at that) of throwing off the disease quickly and completely, but also prevent its spreading to his playmates and school-fellows and friends.

An Italian Editor on the Temperance Question

THE following interesting letter from Mr. Frank L. Frugone, editor of the Bollettino Della Sera, presents one interesting view of the temperance question:

The Italian population of the United States exceeds 2,000,000—one of the greatest New York exceeds 500,000—one-eighth of the population of the entire city. The BOLLETTINO DELLA SERA, Three Editions Daily, completely covers this vast and fertile field. It supplies the key to these substantial homes.

FRANK L. FRUGONE, Treasurer and Business Manager, 178 PARK ROW, NEW YORK.

Telephone 1693 Worth.

"Dear Sir—I have read Mr. Hearst's announcement in regard to the war that his papers are urging against drunkenness and drugs and, like all other citizens, I congratulate him and thank him most heartily."

"I think I speak as a good many million Americans would, when I say that I appreciate especially the moderation and common sense which characterize Mr. Hearst's announcement—different from some announcements that have been heard of, in which a cigarette has been declared as dangerous as whiskey and in which the light wines which the Italians and French have used for centuries are classed with whiskey—which is the curse of America."

"Hearst's suggestion that all alcoholic beverages containing more than 10 per cent. of alcohol be forbidden would solve the question absolutely. This would do away with whiskey, which has proved itself as great a curse to the native born American almost as opium to the Chinese."

"And this would make temperance possible and solve the problem, without compelling millions of French, Italians and German-Americans to change their way of life because a certain number of citizens are unable to let whiskey alone."

"I have lived and traveled in countries where drunkenness is no problem at all—Italy, for instance."

"In my family, my three sons and my two daughters, their mother and I have wine with our meals, in greatest moderation, of course, as our ancestors have done for more than a thousand years."

"Whiskey is no more thought of than opium or cocaine or any other poison. The difficulty with the usual temperance campaign is this: Its well-meaning supporters undertake to deprive the temperate Italian or Frenchman of his light wine, the temperate German of his light beer, just because some Americans are unable to deal with whiskey. That is about as reasonable as it would be to deprive me of tobacco because somebody else was injured by opium."

"Mr. Hearst's suggested legislation, barring everything containing more than 10 per cent. of alcohol, would do away with whiskey and gin, class them among the poisons and drugs, and settle the question of drunkenness once and for all."

"I may add that to those of us who come from temperate countries without a 'drunkenness problem,' the American 'treating custom' should be largely responsible for the excessive use of alcohol in this country."

"Almost every minute of the day and evening, while passing in front of saloons or cafes, you see the pitiful spectacle of five, six or more friends at a bar treating each other until almost 'till' in their stomachs and empty in their pockets of their week's wages. They should be spent for food, clothing, etc., for family and children, mothers and fathers!"

"Why not imitate the Italians in their general custom of treating your friend today and exchanging the compliment tomorrow, or the next time you meet?"

"In Italy a friend invites a man to a 'cafe' or 'osteria.' They sit at a table, he calls for a bottle of Chianti or other wine (never whiskey). They enjoy half an hour together. He pays the scotto (bill), and the next time they meet the compliment is returned by the other fellow. AND THAT IS THE PRINCIPAL REASON THAT THERE ARE VERY FEW DRUNKARDS IN ITALY!"

"The same thing can be done in America with moderate persuasion by PHRENS."

"We produce very good quality of light wines here in America at moderate prices."

"If my suggestion can help your cause in any way, make the use you see fit of it."

Sincerely,

"FRANK L. FRUGONE."

The Rainbow

By William F. Kirk

It flares across the lowering skies

As brilliant as the dawn's first glory

And oh, the countless weary eyes

Made brighter by its old, old story.

God's promise, given to you and me,

It looms unwavering o'er the mountains.

Fair as a mother's face to see,

Fresh as the mist o'er splashing fountains.

I saw a rainbow in my youth

And dreamed of fane of love and treasures.

I was too blind to see that truth

Lurking behind the mask of pleasure.

But oh, it was so sweet to plan!

And while Hope's star no more is beaming

Pond memory brings her caravan

And still I see the rainbow gleaming.
